

Mark A. Moyad, M.D., M.P.H.

Vitamin E and Prostate Cancer

Mark A. Moyad, M.D., M.P.H., occupies an endowed position created and funded entirely by his patients. He is the Phil F. Jenkins Director of Preventive & Alternative Medicine at the University of Michigan Medical Center (Department of Urology).

Mark published his first medical paper in college (College of Wooster, Wooster, Ohio) at the age of 22 on the effect of a compound found in cottonseed oil and its potential impact on male fertility. He received his Masters in Public Health degree from the University of South Florida (Tampa, Florida) with a focus on environmental health/epidemiology. He was one of the principal investigators of the L-tryptophan supplement investigation in the State of Florida. Mark received his Medical Degree (M.D.) from the Wayne State University School of Medicine (Detroit, MI), and he is currently finishing his Ph.D. in pathology at the same institution, along with his N.D.

The primary author of over 80 medical articles, Mark is the editor-in-chief of the soon to be released medical journal “Seminars in Preventive & Alternative Medicine” by Elsevier. He is an editor or regular reviewer for numerous medical journals including British Journal of Urology, Cancer, European Urology, International Journal of Cancer, Lancet, Journal of Urology, Nutrition and Cancer, Urology and others. He is also the editor of the Humana Medical Book Series on Preventive & Alternative Medicine. Mark is the co-author or author of five books, and he has maintained a consulting practice in Preventive and Alternative Medicine for the last 10 years.