

A social responsibility initiative empowered by a collaboration of hemp industry stakeholders and supporters.

Mission

Hemp for our Future is a social responsibility campaign to support the production and donation of hemp-based materials, products, and foods to medical professionals and community organizations to help those impacted by COVID-19.

Initiative

Just like in 1942 when U.S. farmers were called to action through the Hemp for Victory Campaign to bring hemp back into rotation on U.S. soil to help our citizens during WWII, we are calling on the US hemp industry to unite together and take action to again prove the incredible potential of hemp in supporting our country during times of crisis.

With hemp's ability to provide us with thousands of sustainable products used in everyday life, our industry is well positioned to make a positive impact during these trying times. Help us support our agricultural hemp farmers, food manufacturers and industrial product producers, working with all aspects of the hemp plant.

How does this work?

If your business is able to help, the network will connect you with others in your region who can work with you to facilitate the production and delivery of supplies to those in need. When we identify organizations in need accepting donations, we will notify you about the opportunity to help. We will highlight successful donations through the platform, industry organizations, and media.

Disclaimer

Participation is limited to legal activities. Members promise to maintain the integrity of our global hemp industry by being kind, supportive, and cooperatively communicating.
